The New SFN Website Is Live

SFN STAFF REPORT

After many weeks of work, Schaghticoke First Nations has launched our new website at www.schaghticoke.info. The new site features news, history, our programs, media, photos, videos, information about the Tribal Leadership, as well as the work of our non-profit organization Schaghticoke First Nations, Inc., and more. We are encouraging Tribal members to visit the site and provide feedback on what you like or feel could be improved. The new SFN website is part of our media strategy to raise the visibility of our ongoing work and initiatives.
Schaghticoke First Nations speaks at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Indigenous perspectives on the intersection of human rights and the environment were the focus of a free public discussion featuring Sachem Hawk Storm, Chief of the Schaghticoke First Nations, and Kasike Roberto Múkaro Borrero, Chief of the Guainía Taíno tribal community, at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute on Wednesday, January 22. Following the talk, Sachem Hawk Storm conducted a water blessing ceremony with interested students and staff.

SCHAGHTICOKE FIRST NATIONS EARTH WEEK NYC 2020 PARTNER

Schaghticoke First Nations was a part of a coalition that organized a massive strike for the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of Earth Day, today, April 22. As Indigenous Peoples we Schaghticoke know the climate crisis is here, and we can’t wait for the next disaster to demand climate leadership. While we cannot mobilize in person, we can still make our voices heard from home. Learn more about the action at www.earthweeknyc.com. At that site you can review the programs over the 3 days of digital action to demand a just, sustainable, and livable future. #EarthWeekNYC

NYC SOLIDARITY 4 “WET’SUWET’EN”

Schaghticoke First Nations is a member of the Indigenous Peoples Day NYC Committee (IPDNYC), a coalition of 13 Indigenous Peoples and indigenous-led organizations. The IPDNYC Committee organized a solidarity action outside the Canadian Consulate and Permanent Mission to the United Nations on February 18, 2020, to support the Wet’suwet’en Nation in their opposition to a Coastal GasLink pipeline scheduled to enter their traditional territory in British Columbia, Canada. Thank you to all the tribal members and allies present!
